

We suggest discussing the following points:

- The abolition of borders securing free movement of people and their freedom of settling in.

We should imagine a world where borders between countries progressively disappear; where anybody could travel freely or could go and live in a country of his choice while keeping his own cultural identity.

- A universal access to fundamental rights.

We should imagine a world where the society secures a universal access to fundamental rights to any individual without considering his status or requesting compensation.

- A worldwide ecological patrimony and a decrease of the ecological footprint.

We should imagine a world which recognizes global public goods, and global environmental patrimony. We should imagine a world which would take the necessary steps to preserve biodiversity, to avoid climate change and to protect environment

- Food sovereignty.

We should imagine a world where food and water would not be considered as merchandises, and where access to land and seeds will be guaranteed for everybody

- New democratic areas.

We should imagine a world which organise a plural democracy through various role-players (elected representatives, civil sector, citizens ...) and with various level of responsibilities

Contributions to the debate on these constituent principles would lead to launching an appeal for creating an international movement at the close of the Cochabamba conference.

UTOPIA and Social Forums

For this new edition of the European Social Forum, Utopia is co-organizing in Istanbul 3 large seminars (see program p.2).

Utopia's commitment in the Alterglobalist movement is now fully established: Athens in 2006, then Malmö in 2008, where we organized two seminars. Since then, our movement has confirmed its contribution to international conferences, participating in the World Social Forum in Belem and in the Klimatforum in Copenhagen, both in 2009, and, in Cochabamba in 2010, where was issued a Call for a worldwide network to create a new political vision. (See Cochabamba's call p. 3&4 - www.cochabamba2010.org).

Utopia is a political movement born in France in 1996. It points out 3 alienations, established as dogmas: Growth, Consumerism, and Work as a unique, established and central value in the society. Utopia is urging for the birth of a new Left based on a triple identity: ecologist, alterglobalist and anti productivist, able to transform the society, bear new ideals and realize them.

Utopia's main lines of action are:

- Producing ideas. By means of collective brainstorming and links with intellectuals, through a cycle of lectures and debates, and books publishing (Editions Utopia) ;
- Being present in the public sphere, as a full time partner of the social movement ;
- Action at international level, among others by participating in social forums so as to become an acknowledged NGO and promote the creation of a political space for a "society-world" ;
- Action in the different leftwing parties in France.

► Launching of Editions Utopia (Utopia Publisher)

“Editions Utopia” is an extension of the UTOPIA Movement. The success of the Utopia Manifesto published in may 2008 in France (Parangon publisher), then in Spanish (Icaria Publisher), shortly in Portuguese and in English; the success also of the European manifesto published in 2009 both in French and in English, determined Utopia to create its own publishing office. Editions Utopia will publish intellectuals, researchers and politicians whose ideas are shared by Utopia or feed its thinking, as well as analyses and proposals of the Utopia Movement itself.

- Sans Papier? Pour lutter contre les idées reçues: “No documents? A manual to fight against false evidences”, By Utopia, a collective work.
- Un revenu pour tous. Précis d'utopie réaliste, “An income for everybody. A handbook of realistic utopia”, by Jean-Baptiste Mylongo.

► The Appeal of Cochabamba

New Constitution, new rights, new utopias

Let's build a borderless world

UTOPIA has launched in Cochabamba a great project: The creation of an international network and workgroup: "UTOPIA – a new international political space".

This new network will aim at thinking the conditions for bringing about a new political space integrating countries from the different continents and based on the recognition of new common rights.

In different ways and often at different times, many social organizations, intellectuals, poets or artists have been trying to build new utopias.

These utopias helped define fundamental rights, pointing out their universal nature as in the universal declaration of human rights in 1948

These utopias favoured the convergence of social movements, through social forums and the international network of NGOs and citizens, who nowadays crusade for common interests.

The conference of Cochabamba could be the occasion to move a step forward in this process. It could initiate a large international movement in favour of new constitutional rights.

We therefore call social movements, intellectuals, poets, artists, political parties or movements and citizens from all continents to explore the broad outlines that could eventually lead to the constitution of a new political area
